Catalog Course Description

The course is a survey of emerging regional cultures and societies from the earliest civilizations to 1500. Consideration will be given to comparative and integrative analysis of their contributions to the fabric of world civilization. Particular focus will be given to cultural evolutionary parallels and the diffusion of ideas through migration and trade on a global scale. Students are expected to work and participate at an honors level which includes strong critical thinking skills, thorough analysis of historical readings, presentation and leadership skills demonstrated through class participation/presentation, and service learning in the community. 54 lecture hours.

Course Objectives

- Compare the ideals, practices, and historical developments of the major world religions and belief systems.
- Analyze origin and functions of global institutions and evaluate their contributions to human political, economic and cultural evolution.
- Evaluate the role of networks of trade, warfare, cultural exchange, migration, and biological exchange in shaping human interactions.
- Demonstrate the ability to interpret primary and secondary sources and use them to both build and deconstruct an argument, as appropriate.
- Critically examine the role that analytical categories of race, gender, class, and ethnicity have played in the development of civilization
- Explain the ways in which the environment has both shaped and has been shaped by developments in human history.
- Identify the major discoveries, inventions and intellectual achievements as well as their historical significance.

- Explain broad patterns of change across regional and cultural boundaries.
