Catalog Course Description

The course offers a survey of world civilizations from 1500's regional isolation to modern-day globalism and its issues and problems. Consideration will be given to the political, economic, social, and intellectual forces present in the rise of the modern world. Particular focus will be given to the interrelatedness of historical events and on the comparisons of cultures and societies in a historical perspective. College-level reading is strongly advised. 54 lecture hours.

Course Objectives

- Demonstrate an understanding of civilization through multiple analytical categories such as race, class, gender and ethnicity.
- Analyze ways in which human groups have interacted with one another, including trade, migration, warfare, cultural exchange, and biological exchange, from 1500 C.E. to present.
- Compare the distinctive forms of political, social, and economic organization and explain their historical significance.
- Demonstrate the ability to interpret primary and secondary sources and to compose an argument which uses them, as appropriate, for support.
- Identify major discoveries, inventions, and scientific achievements and explain their historical significance.
- Analyze historical developments across national, regional, and cultural boundaries.
- Explain the ways in which the world's physical environment has been affected by developments in human history.
- Explain the historical significance of cultural developments in areas such as art, music, architecture, literature, and religion through a comparative perspective.
